Alice?

A lost boy who parted with everything and came to Wonderland.
He claimed the name "Alice" for himself and was dragged into the Game to kill the White Rabbit.
He has no motivation towards the Game, but fundamentally, the story is progressing easily.

Cheshire Cat

The Duchess' pet cat who doesn't wear a collar.
He's a hated person in Wonderland who is unique in the fact that he was not awarded an ability within the Game.
He particularly hates that his existence is denied by the Hatter.
It seems his hobby is giving generally useless advice to Alice.

Dormouse

An informant who knows the whereabouts of the White Rabbit.
A self-professed "cautious guy" who runs around the whole country in an attempt to avoid being involved in the Game.
It seems that before his assignment, he was friends with the Hatter.

Mad Hatter

A man whose time was taken by the Queen of Hearts.
The hand of his pocket watch usually points to 6 o'clock, which is tea time. Since that's closing time, he's completely uninterested in selling hats.
He drinks nothing but black tea. He absolutely loves sweets.

The Knave of Hearts

A knave to the Queen of Hearts.
He was brought to Wonderland as the Number 1 Trump soldier. But in truth, that was a blunder of the While Rabbit. Since the man-hating Queen gave him the order "Don't speak more than 10 lettered words every 10 years," he is living a harsh life.

March Hare

A friend of the White Rabbit.
She was given a Rule that can't be used in "the Game to kill the White Rabbit". As such, she has developed an inferiority complex due to being useless.
She introduces herself as "Mitsuki" and for now she's existing as the Hatter's customer.

T/N: "Mitsuki" is both a female name and means "three months" in Japanese. The third month being March, of course.

Marianne

A mysterious girl who lives in the den of the depressed White Rabbit.
Without intending to, sometimes the things she talks about only reach the listener in bits and pieces that can't be understood very well.
The red flowers she was growing with care have already withered.

The Queen of Hearts

The Queen who rules Wonderland and exists for the sake of collecting the heads of residents who do not obey the Game's rules.
He hates the color red and had all the hearts repainted in a different color.
He's an extreme womanizer who is served by 51 female servants (his Trump Soldiers).

White Rabbit

A disorderly guy who is continuing to construct Wonderland.
He brings people who have lost their attachments to the country, gives them a new name and binds them with the Game's rule.
He's working together with Marianne, a girl who possesses no will of her own.
